Events Report

(January 2020 – May 2020)

5th February CTF Workshop

"Bad programmers have all the answers. Good testers have all the questions." UPES-CSA brings 'Capture the Flag' workshop to you with a motive to engage students in different domains other than their own. The 'Capture the Flag' are games where hackers have to find bugs and solve puzzles to find "flags," bits of data that tell the system you've completed a given task.

In this workshop we shall describe about CTF, and shall also guide you all on how to work your way around bugs. We shall also cover the basics of debugging and correct the bugs in the code. This Workshop is Collaborated with Cyber Sentinel

Lights out!

It was a sad day for Vikram. The kids in Kindergarten could be mean sometimes. But that's just how kids are. Unfortunately for Vikram, he couldn't understand that. Nobody expected a 5-year-old kid to understand. As Vikram sat in the back seat of his mother's car all he could think about how the other kids just made fun of him. The overcast weather just added on to the dull feeling. His mother, seeing a frown on his face asked what was troubling him.

"The kids in the class are mean to me.", he said folding his arms.

"That's just because they're jealous of you.", she replied.

However, Vikram wasn't satisfied with the answer, and she knew it. The rest of the ride just went on without anyone speaking. When they reached home Vikram just went to his room and closed the door behind him. His mother knew that she had to give him some privacy and started preparing for dinner. Around 5:00 pm, Vikram's father returned home from work.

"Vaishnavi, bring a glass of water for me, will you?", he requested while setting down his briefcase.

"Vikram was picked on again today in school.", Vaishnavi told him after giving him a glass of water.

"You should talk to him Keshav."

Keshav agreed and went into Vikram's room. He found Vikram laying in bed reading his favourite comic book. Keshav always had a connection with Vikram which his mother never had. He was able to calm his son down and explained that he needs to stand up for himself.

"Dinner's ready!!", Vaishnavi said from the kitchen downstairs.

Keshav picked Vikram up and carried him to the dinner table like a superhero. It was Vikram's favourite, 'tindey kei sabzi'. Vikram was happy again.

Next day was a holiday. But Keshav had to go for a business meeting. After all he was THE Keshav Thakur of Infocorps Ltd. He kissed his wife goodbye in the morning and went on for the meeting. Vikram woke up at 9:00 AM ready for breakfast. After breakfast Vikram had his friend Ajay come over for playing. The kids played in the garden all afternoon. After a brief amount of rest Vikram saw what looked like a cute little puppy in the driveway of the house. He picked the puppy up and brought it inside along with Ajay.

"Can we PLEASE keep him?", he requested his mother.

Vaishnavi, at first hesitant, agreed after seeing the cute little eyes of both the puppy and her son.

"But we need to ask your father too.", she said. But Vikram couldn't hear this as he was already celebrating and dancing with Ajay and the puppy, still holding him. Ajay went home just minutes before Keshav came back.

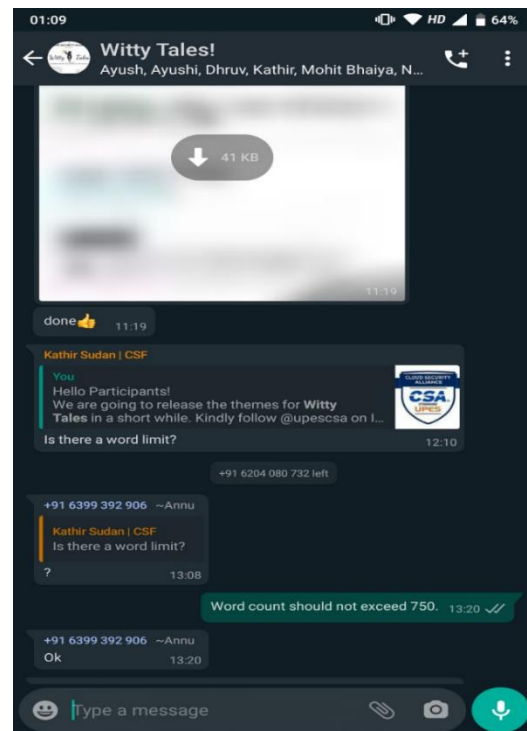

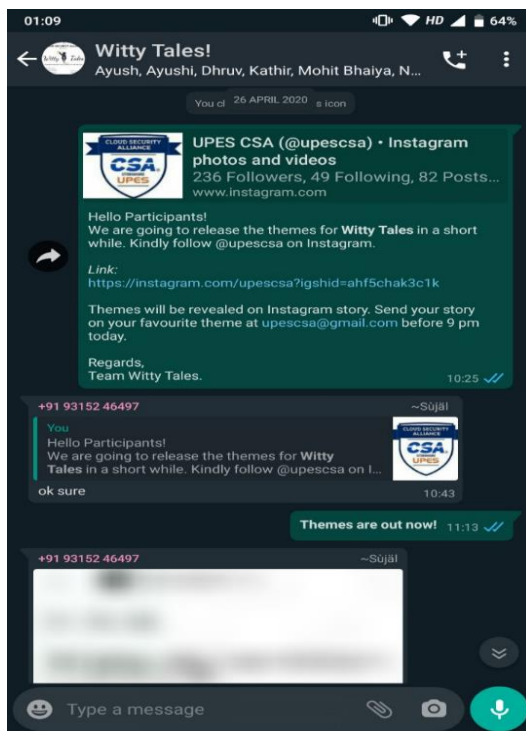

He had a smile on his face entering the house as if he had won a war. But that face turned into confusion when he saw a dog in his house.

"VAISHNAVI!", he called for his wife, demanding an explanation. His wife explained everything and after seeing how happy Vikram was, he agreed. Vikram had never been so happy. That night while having dinner Keshav tried to feed the dog. The dog was completely repelled by what he was being given. But Keshav wasn't taking no for an answer. Despite the protests of Vaishnavi he brought the piece of chapaati close to the dog's mouth but the dog bit his hand and ran away. Keshav cried in agony but agreed that he was a little over the line for it. After dinner the whole family went to sleep.

At around 1:00 AM when everyone was asleep Keshav and Vaishnavi heard a loud bang from downstairs. Thinking that it was maybe Vikram and the dog downstairs Keshav rushed downstairs. He opened the lights and went down the staircase. Just when he reached downstairs the lights went out, submerging him in darkness.

Then he heard his wife screaming from the room. Somehow, feeling the house walls he reached the Master bedroom. What he saw there chilled him to his bones. His wife and son who he dearly loved were hung from a rope to the ceiling and their lower parts were nowhere to be found. Disgusted, distraught and scared he went back in the corridor, where he saw the puppy his son brought in their home. And just then, in the moonlight he saw what his son had actually brought in their home.

The next morning, the maid came home and called the police. Inspector Debakar had never seen such a grisly crime scene before. Standing in the driveway trying to figure out what had happened, he felt something brush his foot. It was a cute little puppy. He patted it on the head and put him in his car. "I'm definitely taking you home tonight. The wifey will love you", he said, unbeknownst to what horrors awaited him.
